

In the 50 years I have lived and loved the OCEAN WILDLIFE in Florida I have watched with dismay at the decline of wildlife and general disregard for its health as the consequences of development of all kinds have impacted it. Florida will be just another big gulf community soon. No one will want to swim from the polluted beaches and I certainly don't want to eat fish caught in local waters now. It is really the last chance to make a difference by legislating some controls for the future of Florida's Coastal Reefs and its surrounding waters and wildlife.

Sincerely,
Mary Rochester
